Overview

The interdisciplinary conference will offer current infection prevention topics, including the future of infection prevention and high level disinfection, which has gained much attention by our regulatory agencies in the last few years. Our expert panel of infection preventionists will answer participants questions regarding trends and issues in infection prevention today.

Target Audience

This event will benefit physicians, advanced practice providers, nurses, educators and allied health professionals interested in learning more about infection control and prevention.

Continuing Nursing Education

Contact Hours: 6.0

VCU Health is an approved provider of continuing nursing education by the Virginia Nurses Association, an accredited provider by the American Nurses Credentialing Center's Commission on Accreditation.

Registration Information

The registration fee includes program materials, continuing education contact hours, continental breakfast, refreshments, luncheon. Minimum and maximum numbers for attendance at this conference have been established, and we reserve the right to substitute speakers/topics, or cancel if necessary.

Online registration is through the VCU Health CloudCME portal. Non-VCU participants will need to create an account in order to register. Credit card payment is online via a secure encrypted card processor.

Special Guest Faculty

Keith S. Kay, MD, MPH is Professor of Internal Medicine and Director of Clinical Research, Infectious Diseases at the University Of Michigan School of Medicine. His career has been devoted to prevention and management of healthcare-associated infections. In addition to serving quality improvement and administrative roles in infection prevention, antimicrobial stewardship and quality and patient safety, he has served on national and international clinical guidelines committees. His research focuses on antimicrobial resistance, particularly among gram-negative bacilli; optimizing use of polymyxin antimicrobials; prevention of healthcare associated infections including Clostridium difficile, multi-drug resistant organisms, central-line associated infections and surgical site infections; and innovative approaches to antimicrobial stewardship.

Costi D. Sifri, MD is Associate Professor and Director, Hospital Epidemiology at the University Of Virginia School of Medicine, with foci on hospital epidemiology, immunocompromised infectious diseases, molecular pathogenesis and epidemiology, innate immunity. Dr. Sifri's major research focus is on understanding the molecular epidemiology of dissemination of multidrug resistant organisms (MDROs) in the healthcare environment. He is particularly interested in using molecular and genomic approaches to understand patterns of MDRO transmission in the clinical setting and the contribution of horizontal gene transfer to the spread of resistance. Dr. Sifri is also interested in understanding the clinical consequences of MDRO infections and identifying effective methods to limit or curtail the spread of resistant organisms and determinants.
